

> Wild Cherry Bark Extract 4 fl. oz.

Wild Cherry Bark Extract 4 fl. oz.

Manufacturer: Pure Herbs, LTD.

Below is about historical observations and historical data relating to herbs. This document is not intended to be a substitute for medical advice by license physicians. All readers should consult a physician regularly in all matters related to medical problems. This includes the diagnoses and treatment of disease and all other physical and mental conditions.

WILD CHERRY BARK - This widely distributed tree of North America has an agreeably bitter, slightly warm, slightly sweet taste. The shared knowledge of the Native Chippewa Inhabitants of North America did much to bring this gift of nature to our attention. The inner bark of the Wild Cherry Tree, with all its wild vigor, has and does enjoy wide use, by many North American Native Peoples, for coughs, colds, whooping cough, bronchitis, asthma, tuberculosis, daily recurring fevers and to lower high blood pressure. Old-time cough drops actually used to contain some Wild Cherry Bark and worked really well until they were gradually cheapened to taste good and became little more than a confection. European settlers were quick to pick up this valuable information. Jethro Kloss, the beloved American herbal practitioner of the first half of the 20th century, used Wild Cherry Bark for all these purposes with great success. He stated outright, that it cures the chronic respiratory condition of asthma while loosening and expelling old dis-eased mucus from the lungs and respiratory passages. Wild Cherry Bark's sedative properties calm and soothe lungs, stomach and intestines. Research shows the inner bark of the Wild Cherry tree contains a vegetable compound known as hydrocyanic acid. Nature often finds use for minute traces of a compound known as cyanide, which, in its isolated chemical form, is highly poisonous. In the case of B-12, a vitamin essential for life, this principle of cyanide construction is found. This principle is found again in the case of the apricot kernel, which also contains a minute amount of vegetable cyanide, in this case, to kill cancer cells. The presence of hydrocyanic acid in Wild Cherry Bark, as an antibiotic, may well account for its success in such infectious dis-eases as whooping cough and tuberculosis. Wild Cherry Bark's bitter and astringent properties find great usefulness in the case of a relaxed stomach and intestines to make them active again.* DOSE:40 to 80 drops, hourly while awake, until well. If desired, it can be taken a few drops at a time and allowed to trickle down the throat for maximum effect. Wild Cherry Bark Extract can also be rubbed into the throat, chest and back areas. A towel is placed between the chest and the clothing and the back and clothing. Then cover the person with warm bedding. Use only natural fiber clothing and bedding. Heat and moisture are built up and assist Wild Cherry Bark in breaking up hardened mucus congestion. The towel and warm clothing also absorb the poisons which are sweated out. For stomach and intestinal use, 40 to 80 drops, 3 to 4 times per day.*This product has not been evaluated by the Food and Drug Administration.

This product is not intended to diagnose, treat, cure or prevent any disease.

The products and the claims made about specific products on or through this site have not been evaluated by Heaven & Herbs or the United States Food and Drug Administration and are not approved to diagnose, treat, cure or prevent disease. The information provided on this site is for informational purposes only and is not intended as a substitute for advice from your physician or other health care professional or any information contained on or in any product label or packaging. You should not use the information on this site for diagnosis or treatment of any health problem or for prescription of any medication or other treatment. You should consult with a healthcare professional before starting any diet, exercise or supplementation program, before taking any medication, or if you have or suspect you might have a health problem. By ordering products from heavenandherbs.com, you submit that you are in agreement with our disclaimer and terms of use.